

Michael E. Stone
African and Asian Studies, Hebrew University, Mt. Scopus, Jerusalem, 91905, Israel telephone: +972 2 641-2906, fax: +972 2 642 -6631 email: stone@vms.huji.ac.il 15 lines

Clichés

The subjects that catch my eye, have caught others' eyes before.
Once I called Ararat a many clichéd mountain.
But it is so powerful that it cracks the cliché like a nut.
New is seeing, not the seen.

How many falls have been,
But when green withdraws, Sap's sucked in,
Red flares.

In a log, a gas pocket hisses, flames yellow-red,
and dies.